FUNERAL OF R. D. STEVENSON.

The Services Held at First Methodist Church in Terre Haute.

Robley D. Stevenson, the humorist, who had been connected with Indianapolis papers-the Journal and the Press-for ten years, was buried yesterday afternoon at Terre Haute. The funeral services were of simple character, held in the First Methodist Episcopal Church, the Rev. J. W. Walker in charge. The body was interred at Woodlawn Cemetery, the services at the grave being even more simple than those

Mr. Stevenson spent much of his early a farmer to plant ten or fifteen acres of youth and young manhood in Terre Haute, ground a week. Now, with the horse-power Indianapolis to engage in newspaper work. In Terre Haute Mr. Stevenson's brother and stepmother, his only near relatives, reside. These and intimate friends of the family, the committee appointed Friday by the Indianapolis Press Club-Miss Laura Smith, Charles Casad, Horace Lancaster, Frank T. Baker, F. H. McElroy and F. K. Hubbard—were present at the graveside. At the church no Terre Haute newspaper men were present, with the exception of C. B. Oakey, the editor of the Terre Haute The pallbearers consisted of the Indian-polis Press Club committee and Mr.

LOTS IN A CEMETERY.

The Trade Called Off When This Fact

A lawsuit in Justice Smock's court yesterday developed some interesting facts. John Heaton sued John S. Jolly, familiarly known as "High Life Jolly," for the conversion of a buggy to which plaintift sometimes of cholera, that swept over the claimed ownership. It appeared that the buggy was to have been included in a trade, by which Jolly was to acquire title to "lots" in Manila, and Heaton was to Jolly. The buggy was to be turned over to Jolly as part consideration of the trade Before the negotiations had been completed Jolly sent for an abstract of the property and upon examination of it found the "lots" were in a graveyard in Manila, Ind. The deal was then called off, and Jolly retained possession of the buggy, which Heaton had stored in Jolly's barn until he should take possession of it and the transfer should be completed. A jury returned a verdict in favor of the plaintiff.

An Unusual Accident on the Schrader

Building.

Fletcher Smith, colored, living at 1522 Yandes street, and employed on the new Schrader building at Pennsylvania and Maryland streets, met with a most unusual secident about 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. He was working on the third floor, tending from the right eye upward and tack to the topmost part of the skull, and then down the left side to the ear. He was stunned and was unable to help himself for some minutes. Loss of a large quantity of blood led witnesses and curious spectators, who gathered in large numbers, to believe his injury fatal. They were surprised to see him get to his feet with ssistance and walk to the ambulance. At the Dispensary it was found by Dr. Jacobs that the cut extended throughout its length to the skull, and the scalp could be laid back on both sides, exposing the whole top of the skull, upon which there appeared to be no scratch. The nature of the cut is one which is rarely seen, and, with a few slight variations, it would have been necessary to say he had been scalped.

THE GROWTH OF INDIANA

ERY PHASE OF DEVELOPMENT.

Tax Commissioner Wingate Talks Interestingly on the Subject-W. S. Taylor Adds a Word.

ly, remarked State Tax Commissioner development of conditions and industries in this country. Take hogs and hog raising for example. My uncle, James Wingate, who died the other day, drove a herd of hogs about twenty-five or thirty years ago from a place in western Ohio clear to Baltimore. They were what were known as 'rangers,' that is, hogs that roamed or ranged about in the woods, in other words, wild hogs. They could travel just like by the Marion Trust Company, adminisponies. Of course they were well fed along the way and given needed rest, and by the actually in better condition than when they started from home. Nowadays, however, we raise hogs that are too fat to NEGLIGEE SHIRTS travel. Why, I often see hogs only nine of 200 pounds. These hogs that my uncle drove to Baltimore were about two years old and weighed about 200 pounds apiece These hogs that are produced now could scarcely be driven a square without getting 'hot.' When a hog gets 'hot' you know he just gives a squeal, jumps into hog has developed or progressed just the same as other things have advanced.

"Then you take cattle breeding and raiswere mighty scarce in this country, I can senses and turned their attention to breeding and improving cattle. Now it is a comroung calves on a farm. Suppose a farmer has eighteen or twenty calves on his place. Why that means a carload of cattle when they are fattened up. Not very lorg ago at our litter railroad station a carload of cattlet wits sold at $79 a head. Some years ago cattle were considered to be selling well if they brought $6 or $30 a head, and we still have some of that same common kind of cattle. But the general character of cattle is greatly improved. Another thing I have noticed in my years of traveling about over this country is the extension of great receiving stations for cattle and ivestock. Only a few years ago there was scarcely a big stockyards or packing es-tablishment west of Chicago. Now there are 600 acres of floor space devoted to the pork and beef packing industry on the banks of the Missouri river. Only recently a big establishment of this kind was started n Fort Worth, Tex. Before that plant was erected and put into operation there was a dellar's difference between hogs in Chicago and hogs in Texas. Now there is only 50 cents difference That packing house has raised the value of the farmers' hogs in BUILDING IMPROVEMENT. "One of the greatest improvements has been in building. When I was a boy it took a whole summer and part or all of the fall to build a farmer's house. The carpenter had to dress the lumber and shape out the joists, laths, window casing and all other pieces laboriously by hand. He had to dry the lumber by stacking it up and building a fire underneath, reversing the position of each piece of lumber as the tops became dry enough to use. Nowadays a fine house. The farmers are now living not in houses, but in edifices. They used to live in log cabins, but they have kept pace with the general development and are long past the log cabin period. They have telephones in their houses now. Why, can go over to my little town and talk to twenty farmers by telephone any time I "The arduous work of farming has been almost relegated to the past in the country's general march of improvement. It used to be considered a pretty good job for planter, he can 'put in' nearly a hundred acres in the same time. The truth of the of the times. This season was two weeks late, but the farmers are caught up now, to suit. Corn planting will be practically finished in Indiana this week. You see, it is only matter of a few days now where it used to be a matter of weeks. "I am one of those fellows," continued

Mr. Wingate, "who believe that this development has occurred in all lines of life. I believe the country has grown better Why, look at the vast increase a hospitals in my lifetime, for instance Only a few years ago the Catholic Church was about the only religious sect that supported hospitals. Now, however, all the churches are coming to realize that, in adlition to the future benefit that is expected to come to people through this Christian faith, they must give them something tangible right here on earth. So the Methodists are building what they call deaconesses' hospitals. They are planning one n this city right now. The German Lutherans have many of them in active opera-

"Another great stride that has been made there used to be terrible plagues or repairing. scourges,' as they were called, sometimes of diphtheria, sometimes of smallpox and country fust like a Dakota hailstorm weeps over a wheat field, and they didn't leave very many behind them-made practically a clean sweep. Nowadays such things are practically unknown. We have isolated cases of diphtheria and of other diseases that are nearly as bad as those that used to occur, but families are quarantined and the plague is stamped out in a

"But to return to the moral phase of this development. You know how tightly the railroads are drawing the lines on their employes nowadays. If a man is caught taking a drink of liquor when he is on duty t means the loss of his position. Why, it has not been so very long ago that traveling salesmen thought they had to get a customer drunk and show him a high old time in order to sell goods successfully, Now I venture there is scarcely one traveling man in twenty that pursues the old IN NORTHERN INDIANA.

When Mr. Wingate indulged in remarks of the foregoing tenor he had just returned to Indianapolis from a tour of northern Indiana, in various parts of which he had been holding what are termed "district meetings" with county and township assessors for the purpose of "comparing notes" and arriving at a more uniform method of listing property for taxation. Mr. Wingate was asked for an expression as to conditions in that part of Indiana. "Well," he replied, "that part of the State s going to make a fine showing this year on the tax duplicates. The farmers are unwheat, plenty of cattle and plenty of fine LER. hogs. The wheat crop is a trifle short, but what there is of it is in the best of condi-

After the reporter left Mr. Wingate he sappened to meet ex-Governor Taylor, of Kentucky. Mr. Taylor had come down to the heart of the city to get some medicine for his wife, who was not feeling well. The hour was late at night and drug stores in the vicinity of his home were closed, requiring him to make a trip down town. Mr. Taylor remarked that the climate in this part of the country does not seem to agree very well with Mrs. Taylor, "But it does with me," he said, "I have never had better health in my life than during the time I have resided in Indianapolis." Mr. Taylor said there was a time, however, when Indiana climate was not nearly so salubrious as it is at present. "There was a time," he said, "when the State was positively shunned by outsiders on account of its miserable climate. It used to be noted for the prevalence of chills and fever within its borders. This has been practically done away with, however, by clearing off much of the heavy forests and by scientific draining and by the operation of laws and rules of sanitation, until now the State has come to be a famous health resort. I think Indiana is the finest place in the United States who started the fund by subscribing $1,000 | to live." Mr. Taylor was then informed that he had unconsciously added a few thoughts to a talk delivered by Tax Commissioner Wingate a few minutes before. When in-formed of the line of Mr. Wingate's discussion he said: "Mr. Wingate is perfectly right in what he says, Why, I have noticed improvement right here in Indianapolis. Occasionally I take a ride about the city and I see everywhere evidences of progress, development everywhere. Take the so-called cheaper portions of the city, if you please, the parts in which the poor people reside, and you see that houses are constantly being built to replace the old ramshackle dwellings. Even the poorer classes are living better than they used to live." 'I haven't any particular desire to change the subject," continued Mr. Taylor, "but have you any idea when they are going to begin work on the new federal building?" "Great Scott," ejaculated the reporter, what ever made you think I had the attribute of omniscience? "Well," said Mr. Taylor, as he boarded a Pennsylvania-street car, "the government moves slowly in such matters, but when the building is done it will be as good as
